

For All of Humanity

Mesoamerican and Colonial Medicine in Enlightenment Guatemala

MARTHA FEW

THE UNIVERSITY OF
ARIZONA PRESS

TUCSON

Contents

List of Illustrations	viii
Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: Medicine and Colonialism in Enlightenment Guatemala	3
1. Humanitarianism and Epidemic Death	29
2. Typhus and the Landscapes of Maya Medicine	62
3. Constructing Colonial Fetuses	96
4. How to Inoculate Indians	133
5. "This Marvelous Fluid"	165
Conclusion	197
Notes	203
Bibliography	267
Index	279

Illustrations

Figures

1. Watercolor drawings of the left arm showing smallpox inoculation (variolation) and cowpox inoculation (vaccination) 12
2. Maya cave with “idols” where rituals were performed to prevent or halt diseases, protect crops, and ensure good harvests 83
3. Maya cave with detail showing a cornfield, the cave entrance, and the important cupola room with “idols” in a niche 85
4. Image of the miscarried fetus of Feliciana Margarita Mexicanos 123

Maps

1. Audiencia of Guatemala, Eighteenth Century 6
2. Soloma and Jacaltenango Parishes, Eighteenth Century 63
3. Smallpox Outbreak, 1794–96 135